Just past Kantao, the river enters what is called the Banca plains. The pass of Kantao is about half way up the river, between Habei and Twatutia. In the neigh- ed to Cyprusbourhood of Kantao and Sistao there are, on the spurs of hills running down to the pass on both sides of the river, several small stone fortifications, and on the northern or Kantao side there is large-entrenched camp. At this second line of of defence, there will be some hard fighting even after Hûbei is taken, especially if the Chinese fortify this part of the country, which they appear to be doing." Ships riding at author in a north-easter roll and pitch a good deal, and sometimes drag. In typhoons the outer bay is not considered a snug anchorage Inside the reef the harbour is filling up rapidly: where vessels of the schooner class of say 120 to 250 tons capacity used some 20 years ago to lie comfortably, only junks can do so now. Unless something is done towards preventing the throwin the coaling trade, and measures are taken to recover the muddy flats in the neighbourhood of Kelung city, through which the stream from the shooty-bird-mans-side flows, the depth of water must become less and less year by year. Running your sampan or gig past the ree aforementioned, and passing over no end of rocks, which appear to be a few inches under water, but are really two or three feet at the least, you beach in a nice sandy little corner of the bay, in which you find several cottages built of stone and lumps of coral or rock and adjoining or in rear of which is a dilapidated and very common type of Chinese fort fast disappearing. A high bluff rises up, forming a sort of headland, and which is really the western extremity of the harbour. The headland seems to have been severed from the other hills composing the boundary of this side of the harbour, and a huge chasm offers a passage to another bey which you get a good view of from a ship's deck on the starboard side as you enter the port. On the 28th January, after the mails from San Francisco and New Zealand had been landed, a force was sent ashoro from a German man-of-war which was lying in port, and the men paraded the streets of Apix in order to intimidate the On the following day four boatleads of men were landed from the German man-of-war, and took possession of the land where the King of Samos resides. They erected a flagstaff on the spot and built a sham redoubt. Herr Webber sent coloured labourers to do the work, while sailors were posted all round as sentries. It is stated that the arrival of John Lundon on the scene caused the Germans to take this precaution. Lundon, who is a strong advocate of the annexation of Samos by New Zealand, had a long conversation with Masu, the ingmaker, upon the state of affairs, and Masu said that he would go to New Zealand and sign Sir George Grev's netition for annexation. streams of fresh water flow, there are a few sickly schooner Fleetwing, flying, the Samoan flag, is expected to reach Auckland about the 29th February, with a deputation on board from the Zealand Government relative to the annexation. sandstone, mixed with a very small modicum of of Samoa. also offered to Germany some small concessions in Africa, and agreed to France taking the New Hebrides. Prince Bismarck refused to accept the conditions proposed, and Earl Granville then replied that the present state of affairs in regard to New Guinea was straining England's relations with her colonies. Prince Bismarck said that this was a matter of internal policy that did not affect Germany, and insisted upon the fulfilment of the promise made by England limiting the British Protectorate in New Guinea to the southern-coast of the island. In January Earl Granville lodged a protest against the German annexation in New Guines prior to the proposed Commission on the Pacific question. Lord Granville intimated to the German Government that England had now extended her Protectorate to Huon Bay, on the eastern coast of New Guinea, and at the same time charged Germany with intriguing for the possession of Samoa: Upon receipt of this information Prince Bismarck instantly wired to London that an extension of the British Protectorate to Huon Bay would involve a collision of interests between England and Germany. Lord Granville explained that he was not aware that Germany desired to extend her power conthward of Huon Bay. Prince Bismarck subsequently protested against the extension of the British Protectorate to Huon Bay and the D'Entrecasteaux and Woodlark Islands. He admitted that a treaty existed between Germany and Sames, and intimated that neither England nor New Zealand must annex that island. At present there is a deadlock in regard to the situation.

Mr. Murray Smith has telegraphed back as follows :- " Germany has objected to the recent extension of British claims in New Suines, and a discussion will take place over this proceeding in conjunction with great efforts on the part of England to induce Germany to retire altogether. The conference is not yet settled: but in accordance with the desire of Germany Messrs. Thurston and Kranel will probably be appointed only to confer and report upon the state of British and German establishments and interests in the Pacific. This does not include the New Guinea question, though it will probably come on for discussion." BILLS OF LADING.

A meeting of underwriters of Lloyd's, Liverpool and Glasgow, and of various London marine insnrance companies has been held at Lloyd's, under the presidency of Mr. William Young. The circular convening the meeting, which was issued on the 21st ult. from Lloyd's, stated that "A deputation of shipowners and other gentlemen connected with various marine insurance clubs had, at their special request, an interview with the Committee of Lloyd's on the 16th ult. They stated that their object was to obtain the consent of Lloyd's to the adoption of a bill of lading which the deputation proposed should be called 'Lloyd's Bill of Lading.' The chief point which the shipowners desire is the introduction of the clause concerning negligence, so that claims against shipowners under that head with regard to cargo may cease. The Committee propose to lay this subject before a genera meeting," &c. The following were the resolutions proposed, the first being outvoted: -1. That in the opinion of this meeting the proposed relief of shipowners from responsibility for the conduct of their servants would tend to increase preventible less of life and property at sea, and is not desirable in the interest of the mercantile community. (This resolution was lost). 2. That if the responsibility of shipowners as at present limited by law be shown to be unduly onerous, having regard to the conditions c? the business, a re-adjustment of the limits will be the only satisfactory remedy. 3. That this meeting, while ready to consider any reasonable proposal with regard to the general limit of responsibility, considers that any alterations of the ordinary conditions of carriago by sea should be effected by legislation, and notby private contracts between individual merchants and the shipowner. 4. That the risks of merchants who accept charters or bills of lading exempting the shipowners from responsibility for the acts of their servants will be thereby greatly increased, and that the acceptance by merchants of such increased risks will be a material circumstance which cught to be communicated to underwriters when they are invited to insure such risks. 5. POST-OFFICE NOTICES.

Attention is invited to the following par ticulars on the subject of Local Delivery :-LOCAL DELIVERY .- No delivery is attempted on board Ship, at the Peak, Kowloon, Aberdson, &c., nor at any private house (even though named in the address) when there is a place of business nearer, at which delivery can be effected (Postal Guide, par. /159). The above Regulation is not new, but has been the invariable rate of the Post Office for many years. Considerable efforts have been made to secure its being generally understood.

To prevent, however, if possible, any further disappointment in the matter, it will appear permantly on the Mail Lists issued twice every day from the Daily Press Office. The Postal Guide for 1885, revised to date will be found in the Daily Press Directory, p. 393 large edition, p. 657 small edition. This

For tones in my heart with strange sweetness throbbing The runes and the tunes of the dear long ago. I am borne to the days that were swift in their flying, All pulsing with music and sparkling with mirth, The days when my childhood no space had for sighing | Bar. No place for the phantoms of darkness and dearth. On the hearth pales the fire's red glow to dull ashen; Without the trees mean in the deepening chill

But faitey rooalls to my spirit the fusition Of spring on the meadow, the plain, and the rill I remember the lines that budded and flowered. The willows that dipped in the full fleeded stream. The crehards with blossoms so lavishly downed, In times when joy held me unchecked and supreme Ah, wild is the winter on lowland and highland, And black break the waves on the storm-battered

And sound the long bugles on peak and on island, And gathers the tempest with haste and with host, I sit by myself in the gray of the gloaming, I muse on the days that were tender and true,

And my heart, like a child fain to rest after roaming Is back in the bright days, my mother, with you. -Harper's Megazine.

poker, and rushed among the mob, shouting 'Here, I'l show you where the best pictures are." So enying, he plied his poker upon furniture of no value, and, thus winning the confidence of the roughs, was able to lead them out of the royal apartments into the kitchen regions, where they spent their patriotic fury upon the contents of larder and cellar. The sequel of this story is very droll, and Bismarck relates it with great relish. A few days after he had saved the Palais Royal, M. Fleury was recognised in the streets as the Duchess of Orleans's secretary, and mobbed. He was being somewhat roughly hustled when a hulking watercarrier elbowed his way through the throng and roured: "Let that man be! He is one of the right sort. He led us to the pillage of the Palais Royal the other day!"—Temple

SOMÉ FAMOUS OLD MAIDS. Look at the list. Elizabeth of England, one of the most illustrious of modern Sovereigns. Her rule over Great Britain certainly comprised the most brilliant literary age of the English-speaking people. Her political acumen was certainly put to as severe tests as that of any other ruler the world ever saw. Maria Edgeworth was an old maid. It was this woman's writings that first suggested the thought of writing similarly to Sir Walter Scott. Her brain might well be called the mother of the Waverley novels. June Porter lived and died an old maid.
